

Wishing You Were Here

(David Buehrer)

She offered up her point of view, it wasn't like all the rest
I saw you start to squirm in your chair and drop your head
You were shocked at the news – you didn't like what was said

Disappointed and perplexed, it was nothing you'd expect
From those who you believed as wise as any or all
You said nothing but on your face – your disappointment and disgrace

Wishin' you were here
You know we like to share everything
Come and join us when you can
We'll wait patiently for you – wishing you were here

Somethin' tickled my nose, went to itch with my wrist
Smelled the scent of spring when I was a kid
Memories of my past – simply thought of nothin' else

Learnin' to spend time alone, that's not easy for me
But I refuse to let it pass, something new is here at last
And I'll include you as best I can – and still enjoy where I am

Wishing you were here
You know I like to share everything
Come and join me when you can
And I'll wait patiently for you, and anyone else

The blue sky and the air, peace and silence everywhere
That's all she said, can't explain it better than that I know you'd agree if you could – get past the language to your heart

Wishing you were here
You know we like to share everything
Come and join us when you can
I'll wait patiently for you, and anyone else
